BULLETINS

BELGIANS ATTACKED NEAR ANTWERP.

ANTWERP, Aug. 20.—German cavalry attacked the Belgians in the outskirts of Antwerp today. They were driven back, according to an official announcement, which says that the enemy's cavalry was also repulsed at Turnhout and Herenthals. The official statement adds:

"We inflicted some loss and a number of wounded prisoners have been sent to the military hospitals. The situation continues excellent for us at Antwerp."

LONDON, Aug. 20.—Germany has cast the die for war with Japan. An official dispatch from Berlin via Rotterdam says that Germany has rejected the Japanese ultimatum demanding the surrender of Kiaochow to China. A Copenhagen dispatch states that the Japanese Ambassador to Germany has left Berlin.

PEKIN, Aug. 20.—The German governor of Kiaochow has announced that the Japanese bombardment of the port appears imminent.

FRENCH RECAPTURE MUELHAUSEN.

PARIS, Aug. 20.—The recapture of Muelhausen by French troops was announced by the War Office today. The French troops who recently took this important town in Alsace later withdrew when attacked by the Germans and took up a more advantageous position.

FRENCH FLEET BOMBARDS CATTARO.

ROME, Aug. 20.—A dispatch from San Giovanni says the French fleet bombarded the Austrian port of Cattaro Tuesday and Wednesday. One fort was completely destroyed and the others rendered useless.

AUSTRIANS ADVANCE INTO SERBIA.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—A Central News dispatch from Amsterdam says an official report received there from Vienna states that Austrian troops are making a rapid advance in Serbia.

DUTCH FIRE ON GERMAN AVIATOR.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 20.—A German aviator was fired on by Dutch frontier guards at Oostburg, Zealand, today, and was forced to descend. He was disarmed.

Weldon Hunts Safe
on Ship from Genoa

Word was received today by Boston relatives that Weldon Hunt, a well known Boston music teacher, and Mrs. Hunt, are safe on board the steamer Stamboul, now en route from Genoa to New York. The Hunts live at No. 14 Magnolia street, Dorchester.

Prince Eitel Is Now
Quartered at Liege

ROTTERDAM, Aug. 20.—The Kaiser's son, Prince Eitel Frederick, is quartered in the provincial palace at Liege. He is commander of the First Guards Regiment. Prince Alexander Wilhelm also spent the night at the Grand Hotel Liege.

Plan to Threaten British Coast

By LUDWIG VON KLEIN.

Staff Correspondent of the American.

THE HAGUE, Netherlands, via London, Aug. 20.—That the German campaign plans include the capture of Antwerp is indicated by advices received here today saying that German cavalry have advanced to Turnhout, twenty-three miles northeast of Antwerp and to Herenthals, only a dozen miles from the Belgian port.

BELGIANS REPORT FOE IRRESISTIBLE

By BERNARD BELANCOURT.

Staff Correspondent of the American.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 19.—(Delayed in transmission)

—Hundreds of wounded Belgians are pouring in tonight. They say the Germans are showing almost superhuman bravery under the fire directed upon them by the Belgian artillery and that the advance is "irresistible."

The city is hard pressed to care for all the wounded and refugees that have arrived here since Monday. Many of the stores have been closed and it is a difficult task to obtain supplies for the needy.

The censor forbids my sending any information concerning the movements of troops, but it is certain that a tremendous battle is in progress in the area stretching from Diest and Tirlemont.

Belgian officers who have just arrived from the front say that the position of the allies is "most favorable" and that everything is "turning out in the manner anticipated."

Directly south of Herenthals the Germans are reported to be forcing Belgian troops toward Antwerp. Turnhout is only a few miles from the border of Holland, and the Dutch are realizing for the first time that they are menaced by war.

Queen Wilhelmina inspected the barracks today and conferred with her ministers. The Queen's consort, Prince Henry, is taking no part in the military preparations, he having held before his marriage a high position in the German army.

Officers of the Dutch army believe that the attack on Antwerp might have been decided upon by the German general staff because of the delay occasioned by the sharp defence of the Liege forts to the plans of seizing Namur.

Antwerp is regarded as practically impregnable, but if the Germans could capture it they would be able to threaten the British coast.

A dispatch from Maestricht says rumors are current there that British troops have landed on the coast of Germany. This is regarded here as improbable, because such an expeditionary force would be able to secure supplies only by sea and might be cut off entirely.

Report Germany's Fleet Bottled Up

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—An official statement from the British government, declaring that the German fleet outside the Baltic Sea is now bottled up in harbors, and that while English commerce is almost normal the sea-borne commerce is almost paralyzed, and that the forts at Liege are still in Belgian hands, was presented to the State Department today by British Charge d'Affaires Colville Murray.

PREPARING FOR CONCLAVE TO PICK PIUS' SUCCESSOR

ROME, Aug. 20.—Despite the war in Europe it is hoped in official circles of the Vatican that the hostilities, gigantic as they are, will not interfere with the holding of the conclave for the election of a successor to the late Pope Pius X.

The sacred college will be convened as soon as possible and already its members throughout the world are being summoned to Rome for the highest function of the Roman Catholic Church.

The governments of European countries now at war will be asked to give a safe conduct to the cardinals who will come to Rome for the election of the next successor of the Holy Cross.

Interest in the successor to Pope Pius centers in the names of Cardinal Merry Del Val, Cardinal Isidoro Albareda, the former papal legate to the United States, Cardinal Ferrata, one of the most respected members in the diplomatic service of the church, and Cardinal Illia, the archbishop of Palermo.

Together in one, all things in Christ? These words, which he adopted as his motto in an encyclical issued on August 16, 1903, six days after he had been elevated to the pontificate, were on the lips of Pope Pius X. as he died.

White bells tolled and great congregations in the churches poured out their grief in prayer, the body of the Pope was removed today from the death chamber to the Sistine Chapel.

First came the official recognition of death. The cardinal, attired in robes of crimson with violet collar, as a sign of mourning, entered the chamber where the marble-like form of the Pontiff lay in state, his eyes closed, his hands crossed over his chest. Then the cardinal came forward, drew the white veil from the face, and raised it as a covering. Then the camerlengo taking the aspersorium in his hand, sprinkled the still form with holy water while he softly intoned the name:

"Guiseppa Sarto." Three times the camerlengo repeated the family name of the Pontiff, each time raising his voice to a higher key. Then the camerlengo turned to the cardinals and said, solemnly repeating the words: "The Pope was mortuus est." ("The Pope is really dead.")

PIRATES OPEN BROAD SERIES WITH REDS

By NICK FLATLEY.
The Pittsburgh and only two games to pick up on the leading giants for U. S. All-conquering Braves now. Yesterday they enjoyed a general jump.

The Giants fell before the Pirates, while the Braves, by outgunning the Reds, consequently the gap between first and second was lessened by a full game.

Also, the dogged pursuit of the Cardinals and the Cubs was shaken a little. Yesterday the Pirates, by outgunning the Reds, consequently the gap between first and second was lessened by a full game.

The Pirates have spurned wondrously of late. They have downed the Giants twice in a row and have gathered eight of their last nine wins. That, however, should have mighty little to do with the Boston team. Quite a while back the Pirates, then right at the front and going like a high school delfinate at first tango party, arrived in Boston and dropped their erstwhile antagonist, at that time they have never been able to win more than one occasional battle from the Boston batters.

BIG GOAL NOT FAR OFF.
The fact that the Braves lived up to their previous Western form in the first game of the series, the Pirates, suggest well for the future. The Giants, who have lost five of their last six battles, seem to be in for plenty of trouble. Heretofore and hereafter they will be treated as the leaders.

HOW BIG FIGHT STAND.
New York..... 25
St. Louis..... 22
Pittsburgh..... 21
Cincinnati..... 20

For today's opening battle, Dick Duguid seems the most likely selection, as previous to Monday's win he had been the first pitcher to win when he made himself a hero by striking out the first batter of the great Giant series. James worked out a 100 per cent record, and consequently seems entitled to a little more.

The most encouraging fact of the series, looking ahead to the final game, is that Cooper, the sensational Pirate southpaw, will hardly be playing in the final game. The Braves, the youngster in the one pitcher of the team who has the Braves' number.

As he has been yesterday, for the greater part of the game against the Giants, and before yesterday, in a 2 to 1 victory over St. Louis last Friday, there's scarcely a chance of his being sent in, which must be very, very pleasing to Manager Stallings.

PIRATES WILL FIGHT HARD.
McQuillen or Harmon are the Pirate batters they will work to, though Cunningham, the former Boston star, may be used by Director Fred Clarke.

The Pirates now find it fifth place by their most part of the last week, and the Cardinals are in second place. The Braves then the last time the Cardinals hit the front, and remembered that on that highly enjoyable occasion the flying machine they gathered four shutouts in the five battles staged.

But, early in the year it was the Braves who started the Pirates down the foot of the ladder. There could be no time like the present to meet the performance.

Sure it is that the team, only two games from the front, will make things hum before they let go of an inch of ground.

McLoughlin Regains Title from Murray

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—(Special.) McLoughlin defeated B. Lindley Murray by the scores of 6-3, 6-3, 6-4, on the last day of the Cincinnati Athletic Club, thereby regaining his title to the New York State lawn tennis championship.

Murray plainly showed the effect of lack of practice, and McLoughlin had little difficulty in outwitting his opponent. Many brilliant rallies ensued, and the match and spectacular placement about was features of the play, which drew frequent applause from the 1,500 persons who witnessed the contest.

Sidelights on Sports

In addition to seeing two hours' worth of ball, made all the sweeter by Red Sox victories, the crowd at Fenway Park had some extras thrown in, which were very especially appreciated. It was a very pleasant diversion for more than 10,000 spectators.

The extras consisted of more game announcements at intervals of the progress of the game. The first announcement occurred when the first inning of the Braves-Cincinnati battle was being played. The Boston team had scored three runs in the first inning. The crowd was told that the Reds, lead cheerers.

Then the boy behind the scoreboard showed the figure 4 against the Detroit score, showing the Tigers were ahead of the Athletics 6 to 5 in the seventh. (The Athletics were ahead of the Pirates 6 to 5 in the seventh.)

Later, two runs went up for the Mackmen. (Cincinnati.) Finally the total score of the Pirates-Giants game was bowled through the scoreboard. It was 2 to 1 for Pittsburgh. (Pittsburgh was ahead of the Athletics 6 to 5 in the seventh.)

This last pair of games of the season was staged at Cincinnati. The White Sox were out on a high note in the first game. Each battle was full of fire and fury. The White Sox won the first game by a score of 6 to 1. The second game was a close one, but that was all they got. The White Sox won the second game by a score of 6 to 1.

After that "frantic" was in the second, by Schall, the White Sox won the second game by a score of 6 to 1. The White Sox won the second game by a score of 6 to 1.

SOX ANXIOUS TO GET CLOSER TO ATHLETICS

By A. M. C. MITCHELL.
The White Sox are here for two more days—today and tomorrow. The usual routine will be staged at Fenway Park this afternoon and it goes without saying that the Red Sox will endeavor to make it three straight over their old rivals.

If the Athletics would only lose a game when the Red Sox are winning it would be all right, but if they refuse to lose regularly how can the Sox expect to catch up?

But why the Sox should be playing tonight and tomorrow is a question that is hard to answer. It is not the Sox who are playing tonight and tomorrow, it is the Athletics who are playing tonight and tomorrow.

FEDERALS SHOW THEIR CONTROL OF COLONIALS

That the Colonial League, immediate first of the new New England circuit, is a Federal tributary, seems to be borne out by the developments of the past week or so.

It is now generally admitted by the players and club owners that the pay scale all come from New York. Just what they come from has not been decided, but the general impression around the circuit is that the Federal League is the source.

This belief was greatly strengthened last week, when the son of John Ward of the Brooklyn team made a complete tour of the circuit in the Colonial circuit, accompanied by Federal Charles Copen of the new league.

Ward interviewed every club owner and manager in address in talking business with several of the club owners of the circuit.

Also it has been an admitted fact for some time that the Federal League is the source of the Colonial circuit, and the salary checks are always been on hand promptly.

Several of the best men have been put into the Colonial circuit, and the salary checks are always been on hand promptly.

The Big Chance for the United States

Copyright, 1914, by Star Company.

War is destructive and horrible, but it need not paralyze us in America, especially as we haven't any war here.

Wise men and wise nations make the best of every situation and in every cataclysm look for something worth while.

This is the time to build up AMERICAN MERCHANDIZING, AMERICAN BUSINESS, AMERICAN MANUFACTURES AT HOME AND AMERICAN TRADE ABROAD.

The situation as it affects this country has been reviewed briefly by an able citizen, George J. Whelan.

Here are some things he said. They will interest others who have succeeded in the American field of competition:

"Right now American buyers and merchants should be purchasing all the American-made goods they can get their hands on.

"The companies with which I am identified are laying in great supplies of everything they may need in the next few months. The important thing is to stock up the American trade first, as American merchants are not half prepared for the foreign trade which is sure to come.

"Don't wait until commerce is restored to normal. That will be the time to sell abroad and increase our export business. Buy now, and buy American goods first.

"High prices resulting from the European war are in one respect a good thing for the United States. They will force our people to recognize the wonderful trade possibilities suddenly opened to us.

"Such opportunities were not only never presented before, but were never even dreamed of.

"We should not send any gold to Europe now in the payment of our debts.

"There is no moral question involved in the matter.

"Europe has by law postponed the payment of debts in many instances through the moratorium, and there is no reason why America should not do likewise.

"By withholding our gold we can compel Europe to take payment of our debts in produce and manufactures.

"We are involved in a trade war with England just as England is involved in a political war with other countries of Europe.

"It is now a question whether England or the United States gets the markets of the world lost by France and Germany through this war. We can have them if we will stand together in America like partners and present a united front to the British.

"We suddenly have jumped from a Wilson low tariff to a McKinley tariff multiplied by four—that is the practical effect of the war in a business way.

"Propositions to advance the tariff do not help business so much because of the actual tariff, but because people know prices are going to be higher.

"That starts a buying movement, which ends in a business boom.

"That is exactly what is happening now, and the merchant who does not begin to buy American goods immediately and the manufacturer who neglects to increase his output to the greatest possible volume are making a serious mistake."

Mr. Whelan has a peculiar right to talk about "opportunity." He is not theorizing. His business history proves that he knows opportunity when he sees it.

Not a long time ago you might have discovered Mr. Whelan with a small glass stand in a hotel corner. His empire then consisted of a few boxes of cigars, of which he was the general manager.

At present he controls fifteen hundred cigar stores in the United States known as the United Cigar Stores Company.

He controls 110 of the largest drug stores in the country, called the Riker-Hegeman Company. He also controls the United Profit Sharing Company, the Sterling Gum Company, the Tobacco Products Company and other enterprises.

A man who first gathers together a few boxes of cigars and then gathers together fifteen hundred cigar stores knows something about opportunity.

The man who goes as Whelan did into a small drug store, observes that the profits are large, makes up his mind that they could be made larger by selling more goods and cheaper, then gets one hundred and ten of the biggest drug stores in the country for himself knows opportunity when he sees it.

The advice that he gives in the interview above is of value to citizens, young and old, who would like to seize and realize opportunity as he did—building up a series of gigantic enterprises, not one of them with a dollar in bonds, and all on a cash basis.

The question for the United States and the citizens of the United States who know opportunity when they see it is this:

Who will profit by the general disturbance? Industry and trade are knocked to pieces—WHO WILL GET THE PIECES?

What will the American government do—what will American citizens do to gather in the valuable things that have been dropped and lost by the nations at war?

Here are three of the German aviators upon whom Germany and the army rely for information concerning the enemy—and for other more aggressive work.

Each of these three men represents the highest type of German aviator; each is the winner in difficult air contests.

Phrenology and Its Effect on Mankind

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company.

THERE are innumerable ways in which human beings may find something over which to make themselves miserable.

Here is a man who has a low forehead, and he seems to be carefully collecting all uncomplimentary references to low brows and applying them to his own personal case. He says:

"All my life I have noticed that when referring to the vulgar and ignorant, to the ruffian and the criminal, writers almost always picture them with low or sloping foreheads—that is, they point to this physical peculiarity as an unmistakable evidence of a weak or perverted mentality."

The young man proceeds to state that he has a low, sloping forehead. And he resents the idea that he may be relegated to the lists of the mentally or morally unfit in consequence.

This young man would find a visit to prisons and insane asylums and homes for the undeveloped of interest.

In all these places he would see a large number of "high brows" of men and women with abnormally large heads; with bulging brows, and the "low sloping" foreheads would be there as well.

For, as he proceeds to state, it is the general contour and shape of the head, not the brow alone, which indicates a man's mental development, and the moral qualities or lack of them.

He says:

"I wish to say that if we are to judge a man's character by the shape of his head, we will find a much more accurate guide by ignoring the frontal development and observing the back of the head."

"Long and careful study has convinced me that the shape or height of the forehead has little or no bearing upon the mental qualities of the individual. Many unusually low foreheads often accompany an exceptional degree of talent and intelligence, while many other high, intellectual appearing ones upon investigation are found to belong to stupid persons, all of which goes to show the folly of attempting to gauge human mentality by the height of the brow."

Phrenology, to be of any value, must be thoroughly studied and understood, and the whole personality must be taken into consideration—not the mere head.

Certain developments of the head and certain peculiarities of features invariably indicate certain traits and qualities in a human being; but those traits and qualities of evil can be lessened to a great extent by careful training and right influences.

For instance, people whose eyes are placed close beside the nose, with small space between, invariably are born with a tendency to take a narrow view of things, and with an inclination to be jealous and shortsighted in their observations. Yet was education and association with the broad-minded and the liberal and the just will enable the individual to control and overcome them.

An extreme width between the eyes almost always indicates decided originality and an impatience with old traditional customs and habits. When accompanied with certain other mental qualities genius often results. Yet it is possible that a person whose eyes are set wide apart may have criminal tendencies.

Before we even mentally decide about such a person we must examine his head entire, and we must know what has been his education and environment. There is a certain broad, full brow, with eyes of a direct, clear expression in their depths, accompanied with a refined mouth, which speaks such volumes that one needs not look further to know its possessor is a man or woman of unusual mental endowments and generosity.

The shape of the brow has indeed a great deal to do with the exact type of mentality. But wonderful intellectuality and great genius is often hidden under a low forehead. Extreme development of the organs of observation often gives the forehead a receding appearance. But the flat, low, receding brow of the idiot is quite another matter.

So long as we are not idiots we have it in our power to greatly add to our mental capacity by using to the best purposes all the powers given us and to develop new ones, abilities by constant, steadfastness of purpose and a little time given daily to meditation on some noble thought or ideal.

To think of noble ideals is a far better use of time than worrying over the shape of our foreheads.

More Truth Than Poetry

Priceless

The reason why Mr. Wither-spoon's example in giving back his salary for the time he was absent from Congress is not more widely followed is the average Congressman's firm belief that all the gold of the Indies would not compensate the country for the loss of his services for a day or two.

Blissful Retirement

Manuel of Portugal is probably congratulating himself that he doesn't have to work at his trade of king just at present.

What's the Matter with Them? Why the amazing disposition on the part of Norway and Sweden not to take any sides?

And Even That May Not Be Possible

It is about time for Jupiter to assure the other planets that the war will be localized.

Now He Has an Alibi

Only a year ago the Turk was accused of threatening the peace of all Europe.

A Point Help

Anyway, some of the nations put a good deal of money into the Hague Peace Palace that otherwise would have gone into bullets and field guns.

Put William J. Burns on the trail of the missing dove of peace and he will probably find it caged in some coup d'etat.

The cartographers may have a bigger job on their hands than putting the River of Doubt on the map of Brazil.

Vain and Related Repentance

Remember if George Fred Williams had known what he was starting he never would have said a word.

Women are the Best Soldiers at "the Last Ditch," Says Dr. Hans Huldricksen

"The most significant indication of the final and catastrophic nature of the present world-war is that women are everywhere reported to be preparing to take part in it."

The English militant suffragettes have declared a truce in their own war and some of them have announced their readiness to go to the front to fight.

Numbers of Serbian women have enlisted, as they did in the late Balkan war.

Montenegrin women, who are among the finest, physically, in the world, are eager to fight for their country.

German women, accustomed to labor in the fields by the side of men, are actively preparing for war.

French women are trying to slip into the French regiments disguised as men. Fleets of aeroplanes in charge of skilled aviatrices are being organized in France.

Many of German soldiers who have died before Liege were started on their long journey by bullets sped by flaming-eyed Belgian women.

Russian women, who have played brilliant parts as spies, are now clamoring for a place in the field.

When Was War Invented?

We Don't Know, But Here Is a Pretty Good Picture of the Inventor

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company.

THIS PERSON INVENTED WAR AND HELL.

The thought represented by this monster of iniquity is the thought in every mind now. The artist who made the picture writes for it this dialogue:

Who is the gentleman?

We do not know his name, but he is the one who first conceived the idea of war!

Did he originate any other ideas?

Yes, one more—the idea of Hell!

How did he happen to think of both ideas?

Because they are synonymous!

Is the gentleman now alive?

No! He died countless centuries ago, but his work still lives!

This giant with the club and the bone of his enemy was, perhaps, the "first human" inventor of war.

But tens of millions of years older was the real inventor of war on this planet.

And endless billions of years older the beginning of war on other planets.

We have nearly but not quite outlived it on this little earth. Other planets near and distant, freed from war millions of years ago, look upon us with pity.

So in millions of years to come we shall look upon the undeveloped spheres in space around us, when we shall have outlived war.
